

SPOILERS AHEAD

This document is for the Game Masters' eyes only.

Personal Notes

Players should be given a Personal Note to go with their selected character sheet. These are secrets to be held by the players and only revealed through the story if the player character chooses to. These can be given out randomly, but the GM should take note of which player has which note so they can leverage this against the players.

These notes relate to the mission and won't make complete sense until players start the game, but it's good for players to have them prior to the game starts so they can factor their personal note in while writing their character sheet.

Print this page out and cut out the individual notes. The following has been balanced to work with however many players you have in your game.

FOR 3 PLAYERS

Patriot: While you agree that these weapons should never be used, you realise that if it became public knowledge your government was producing chemical weapons there would be international scandal. You feel the best course of action is sabotage and destruction of evidence.

Truthful: You believe you need to tell the whole truth and nothing but the truth, no matter how ugly that truth may be. You are an honest idealist, but you also find it hard to lie when wearing disguises for your job.

Activist: Even if you get the evidence and prove that your government is producing chemical weapons and get the truth out there, you worry that these weapons may be used regardless. You feel the best course of action is to both sabotage the weapons and get the truth out there.

ADD FOR 4+ PLAYERS

Workaholic: Your job takes up most of your waking hours. What you do defines who you are as a person. You love it, but you also realise this means your co-workers are your only real friends. You are loyal to your friends.

ADD FOR 5 PLAYERS

Broke: For one reason or another, you're short on funds. You can be swayed by money to compromise on your values and do things you normally wouldn't. You should figure out how and why you're short on funds and add it to your character sheet.